In this case, it was intended to try how far the ovarian cyst might be gradually contracted, by drawing off small quantities of the fluid by successive operations: however, considerable inflammation succeeded the first attempt, and she had suffered a great deal from pain and tenderness of the abdomen ever since: an abscess had formed in the parietes, extending downwards towards the pubes. For some days before death, constant sickness, and frequent wandering and delirium, had marked the progress of the disease. SECTIO CADAVERIS.--O11 opening the abdomen, it was found that the parietes adhered closely over the whole lower part of the abdomen, to the omentum, which was spread out over. the cyst. The adhesion was so strong, that it was necessary to tear it away in every part; and the omentum and the peritoneal lining of the abdominal parietes were deeply stained with that carbonaceous deposit, which is the result of an alteration taking place in blood effused during or subsequent to inflammation. The cyst occupied so large a share of the abdomen, that its upper portion rose to the situation of the stomach, and the intestines and liver were pushed up under the concavity of the diaphragm and ribs; and as the adhesions by which it was connected with the parietes were torn through, the cyst gave way in two or three parts, and puriform fluid escaped. The cyst, when opened, proved to consist of...
