I think it is a useful exercise to look at incidents of repression of religious behavior in China over the past number of years, and look at those in terms of what Chinas own legal system requires. I think if we do that, most of the time we will find that the rules that are being violated are the rules that China has set for itself. I think that this approach is more useful than taking standards de-rived from Washington, Ottawa, or London and saying, these are the international norms with which China must comply. I think if we look through the local regulations on regulation of religious behavior in China, I think if we look through the white papers that have been issued by the Chinese Government, I think if we look through the law recently revised on autonomy of local minority areas, in terms of text, those laws are broadly comparable to international standards. The difficulty is in the enforcement process. This is where, it seems to me, a useful way to go about it is to say, here are rules that China has set for itself, and it is in the enforcement of those rules that China should be invited to improve its compliance, rather than saying, we have a set of standards here in Washington, or in Ottawa, or elsewhere. I did want to say a word or...
